SASKATOON metro®

NEWS WORTH SHARING.

Real South Asian Fine Cuisine

Kabab King

PAKISTANI & INDIAN FINE CUISINE

Kabab King is pleased to serve Halal food for over three years in Saskatoon!

- Specializing In Excellent Ethnic Food Including Pakistani & Indian Cuisine
- Lunch & Supper Buffet 7 Days a Week
- Over 25 Diverse Buffet Items
- Over 100 À La Carte Menu Items
- Excellent Catering Service For All Your Parties and Occasions

OPEN DAILY from 11am -11pm

www.kababking.ca • 306·979·6865 • 1A-705 Central Ave

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO US!

METRO SASKATOON TURNS ONE YEAR OLD TODAY — HOW COOL IS THAT? WE WOULD LIKE TO THANK YOU, OUR READERS, FOR ALL YOUR SUPPORT. WE HOPE YOU KEEP TURNING TO US FOR ALL YOUR NEWS NEEDS FOR YEARS TO COME

The Cadillac of Dealers

2010 Cadillac CTS AWD

Crystal Red, 3.6L, Ultraview Sunroof, Luxury and Performance Package, 72,665 km

Stk# 6114A

Now $31,000

$267 Bi-weekly for 72 months

WHEATON GMC•BUICK•CADILLAC

306.244.8131 | 2102 MILLAR AVENUE

WWW.WHEATONSASKATOON.COM

Group seeks anti-bullying bylaw

Brigette Krieg, an assistant professor at the University of Regina's faculty of social work, with a petition calling for an anti-bullying bylaw in Saskatoon. She says support for a bylaw has been encouraging as more than 500 people have signed on. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

'Give us something concrete.' Organizers say such bylaws needed across the province

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

A group in Saskatoon is calling on the city to implement an anti-bullying bylaw, and organizers say support is rolling in.

Spearheaded by the Saskatoon Social Work Students' Society, a petition has more than 500 signatures and Brigette Krieg, an assistant professor at the University of Regina's faculty of social work, said such a bylaw is needed.

"We don't really have anything concrete that actually says to kids, 'You can't do this,'" said Krieg, who started the petition. "I find a lot of educators, parents and the community are in a space where we don't know how to respond."

She continued: "What the bylaw is intended to do is give us something concrete, that if there is bullying going on, we can actually sit down with kids and say, in kind of a preemptive move.... 'If you continue to do this, you can get fined and there will be a consequence.'"

She said there has been strong support from outside Saskatoon as well, and noted that other communities interested in pursuing a similar bylaw have contacted her.

"I don't believe it's just something that Saskatoon needs. I think it's something our province needs," Krieg said.

Saskatoon Fairview MLA Jennifer Campeau, who is heading the province's anti-bullying initiative, said while there is no formal plan to ensure municipalities create anti-bullying bylaws, she is consulting stakeholders to get an idea of the kinds of bullying issues in the province.

"We're looking into everything that's in place right now and once the legwork is done, we'll be able to look at what we need to do," Campeau said.

"It's about just listening right now in terms of engaging these groups and learning what they're doing."

Krieg said the group will meet with Campeau on Tuesday. They plan to present their idea to city council at its next meeting on April 8.

Thomas Cook

Formerly MyTravel/Bel Air Travel

652.1272 1.800.667.6961

402 - 21st Street East

OFFICE HOURS: Mon - Fri: 9am - 5.30pm
Sat: 10am - 4pm (Phone only)
Sun: Closed

COSMOS

SAVE $100 PER COUPLE OFF ON ANY 2013 COSMOS EUROPE VACATION*

*book by Apr 9

Best of Scotland
FROM $1061 Cosmos
MAY-SEP 2013 DEPARTURES – 7 DAYS FROM LONDON-LONDON
Immerse yourself in Scottish hospitality on this amazing vacation.

Splendors of Italy
FROM $1278 Cosmos
YEAR-ROUND DEPARTURES - 9 DAYS FROM ROME-ROME
Italy, a country filled with history, amazing art, delicious cuisine, remarkable architecture, and splendid beauty—you'll see and feel it all on this affordable tour through Italy.

THOMAS COOK ACTS SOLELY AS AGENTS FOR THE SUPPLIERS. TAX & S/C NOT INCLUDED. BAG LIMIT OF 44 LBS. MAX. 2 BAGS. VALID PASSPORT REQUIRED FOR TRAVEL OUTSIDE OF CANADA. ALL VISA REQUIREMENTS MUST BE VERIFIED BY THE CLIENT. PRICES ARE DATE RESTRICTED SUBJECT TO CHANGE & VALID ON NEW BOOKINGS ONLY. BOOKINGS ARE NONREFUNDABLE AND NON CHANGEABLE SUBJECT TO THE TERMS OF THE TOUR OPERATORS BROCHURE. *ALL OFFERS SUBJECT TO RESTRICTIVE TERMS AND CONDITIONS AND MAY NOT BE APPLICABLE TO ALL PRODUCT SOLD. PRICES ARE BASED ON DOUBLE OCCUPANCY.

NEWS 1

Researchers look to stop breast cancer in its tracks

University of Saskatchewan.
$200K grant to help researchers test, develop work, possibly draw international attention

JANE CAULFIELD
jane.caulfield@metronews.ca

Researchers at the University of Saskatchewan have been awarded a $200,000 grant for their work exploring a new way to stop the spread of cancer.

Their innovative research uses state-of-the-art technology to create synthetic antibodies in a test tube, which will induce a combination of two proteins found on top of breast cancer cells that will stop the cancer from spreading to other parts of the body.

"What (my colleague) discovered through his research was that when two particular molecules are brought together on the surface of breast cancer cells ... it actually sends a signal to say stop invading," said Dr. Ron Geyer. "So that's the driving force to combine this antibody technology with this biological insight and how we might stop the metastasis in breast cancer."

The grant, which was awarded by the Canadian Cancer Society, will allow Geyer and his co-investigator Dr. Andrew Freywald to develop and test their research, which will have considerable medical benefits and could also attract international cancer researchers to the province.

"In terms of therapeutics and diagnostics it has medical relevance," said Geyer. "But in Saskatchewan, in terms of research, that money helps us build capacity in this antibody technology in which there's very few centres in the world that can do it."

While the two doctors are currently focusing their research on breast cancer, Geyer did say the work they are doing now could lead to breakthroughs in diagnostics and treatment for many other forms of cancer.

Dr. Ron Geyer stands in his laboratory at the University of Saskatchewan, where he works to create synthetic antibodies that can stop the spread of cancer. JANE CAULFIELD/METRO

Record road deaths last year prompts increased signage

Signage in construction and work zones throughout Saskatchewan highways will be increased this year. FLICKR

A record number of deaths on Saskatchewan highways last year are behind the government's latest move to improve road safety in the province.

The fatalities included highway worker Ashley Richards, who was struck while working as a flag person in a construction zone.

The government has announced more signage in work zones so drivers know when they have to slow down.

The usual orange signs with black worker figures on them will clearly state when workers are actually present.

A black-and-white speed sign will immediately follow to remind motorists to drive no faster than 60 kilometres an hour.

The government has also raised fines for people caught speeding in construction zones.

The fines have increased to a minimum of $210 from $140. They go up for each kilometre over the limit a driver is speeding.

"We need these new signing measures, plus education and enforcement, to make a real change in driving behaviours in the work zone," Highways Minister Don McMorris said in a release Monday.

"We're making it 'black-and-white' for drivers," McMorris said. "With the introduction of the new signage, all drivers need to do is follow the signs for the safety of our workers and for their own safety, so we can prevent future tragedies."

Other initiatives to increase safety through work zones include plans to implement photo radar in some areas later this year and continue adding rumble strips to alert drivers that they are entering a work zone. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Make your TV Appier.

Smarter. Better. Television.

Bet your cable TV can't do this.
No other provider in Saskatchewan can offer the internet-enhanced TV experience of maxTV.™

$19/mo. for three months*

Save up to $600 over 12 months WITH BUNDLE SAVINGS

SaskTel
Your Life. Connected.™

Visit a SaskTel Authorized Dealer or SaskTel Store | 1-800-SASKTEL | sasktel.com/bettertv

* Offer ends June 30, 2013 and is for new Max service customers only. Regular pricing and Bundle savings apply after the three month offer. Up to $600/year savings compared to regular stand alone product pricing and includes bundle savings when you have our Unlimited Long Distance plan, an eligible SaskTel Cellular service plan, SecurTek monitored security system and the maxTV and High Speed Internet bundle. maxTV and Internet services are available in certain areas of the province. See sasktel.com for details. Some conditions apply.

U.S. soldier knifed by teen while playing with kids: Official

Afghanistan. American deaths spike dramatically in March following a five-year monthly low

An Afghan teenager fatally stabbed an American soldier in the neck as he played with children in eastern Afghanistan, officials said Monday. The U.S. death toll rose sharply last month, with an uptick in fighting due to warmer weather.

Last week's calculated attack shows that international troops still face myriad dangers even though they are increasingly taking a back seat in operations with Afghan forces, ahead of a full withdrawal by the end of 2014.

Just one U.S. service member was killed in February — a five-year monthly low — but the American death toll climbed to at least 14 last month.

Sgt. Michael C. Cable
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/U.S. ARMY

Overall, the number of Americans and other foreign forces killed in Afghanistan has fallen as their role shifts more toward training and advising government troops instead of fighting.

But a series of so-called insider attacks on foreign troops has threatened to undermine the trust needed to help President Hamid Karzai's government take the lead in securing the country after more than 11 years at war.

The attack that killed Sgt. Michael Cable, 26, of Philpot, Ky., last Wednesday occurred after the soldiers had secured an area for a meeting of U.S. and Afghan officials in a province near the volatile border with Pakistan.

But one of two senior U.S. officials who confirmed that Cable had been stabbed by a young man said the assailant was not believed to have been in uniform, so it was not being classified as an insider attack. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Netherlands. Four arrested on suspicion of burying deadly nerve gas

Dutch police spent three days digging up a field after receiving a tip that sarin may have been buried there but found no trace of the deadly nerve agent, a prosecutor's office spokeswoman said Monday.

Two men and two women have been arrested in the case in the southern city of Maastricht on suspicion of owning and concealing a deadly gas, spokeswoman Cindy Reijnders said in a telephone interview.

She said police started monitoring a man's movements last week after a tip and arrested him Friday as he was about to start digging in a field just outside Maastricht, a city close to the Dutch border with Belgium. She said police have no indication that sarin was about to be used in a terror attack.

"There are no legal activities you can use sarin for," she said. "But at this moment, we have no information or clues that it was going to be used for terrorism."

Police dug up 400 square metres to a depth of a metre without finding anything.

Reijnders said police believe the four suspects may have been trying to sell the nerve agent for their own financial gain, although it was unclear if they already had a buyer.

Exposure to a high dose of sarin can cause convulsions and loss of consciousness. Death can be caused by suffocation because of muscular paralysis and the effects sarin has on the respiratory centre of the nervous system.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

About sarin

Sarin, first created by German scientists just before the Second World War, is a powerful nerve agent that was used in an attack by a Japanese doomsday cult on the Tokyo subway system in 1995 that killed 13 people and sickened around 6,000.

South Africa

White slavery accuser found stoned to death

South African police say Happy Sindane has been found stoned to death. Sindane made headlines around the world when he claimed he had been kidnapped and enslaved by blacks.

The motive for his killing was not known. Police spokesman Capt. Leonard Hlathi said Monday no arrests have been made.

A four-month inquiry in 2003 established that Sindane was the son of a black domestic worker and the white man for whom she worked.

Sindane had told reporters that he was enslaved, abused, threatened and forced to live outdoors tending animals.

His black family was insulted. They said they had taken in an unwanted child and treated him as one of their own.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Women demand release of relatives detained at Gitmo

Yemeni women hold photos of their relatives detained in Guantanamo Bay prison during a demonstration demanding their release in front of the U.S. embassy in Sanaa, Yemen, on Monday. Yemeni rights activist Abdel-Rahman Barman says conditions at the prison are "very poor" and that at least two of the men there are on hunger strikes. A 32-year-old Yemeni died in an apparent suicide last year. Yemenis make up the largest contingent of the 166 detainees held at the U.S. naval base in Cuba. Most were detained in Afghanistan following the 2001 U.S. invasion. HANI MOHAMMED/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

India. Rapes and murders are scaring off foreign tourism: Study

Foreign tourists offer flowers in remembrance of an Indian woman murdered on a New Delhi bus. MANISH BHANDARI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

The rape and murder of a woman in New Delhi in December followed by two attacks on foreign female travellers has altered how tourists view India and led to a sharp fall in the number of foreign tourists, a new study says.

In the three months since that attack, the number of foreign tourists has dropped by 25 per cent, according to the Associated Chambers of Commerce and Industry in New Delhi. The number of female tourists has dropped by 35 per cent.

Decrease

25%

The drop in foreigners travelling to India in the three months since the rape and murder of a woman on a New Delhi bus.

According to the study, nearly 72 per cent of tour operators said cancellations of holiday bookings came mostly from female tourists from western nations.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tourists beaten, one sexually assaulted aboard van in Rio

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Two arrests made after foreigners were held in public van for six hours

Two foreign tourists were held for hours, brutalized and one of them sexually assaulted aboard a public transport van in Rio de Janeiro's Copacabana beach neighbourhood, police said in a statement.

Two men aged 20 and 22 have been taken into custody and a third is being sought in connection with the incident, which saw the tourists held for around six hours starting shortly after midnight on Saturday, police said.

According to the statement, the suspects forced other passengers to get out of the van and then sexually assaulted the female. During the alleged assault, the tourists were driven to the poor suburban neighbourhood of Sao Goncalo, where the two suspects were apprehended.

The victims' nationalities have not been released, but local media reports have said the woman is American. Reports said the two had been studying Portuguese in Rio for about a month and that both left the country following the incident.

The statement said one of the victims' cellphones was found in the suspects' possession. The suspects had also used a debit card belonging to one of the victims at two gas stations, the statement said.

The Globo television network broadcast surveillance camera images of two men filling up the van and showed police images of a metal bar the suspects are thought to have used to beat and intimidate the victims.

The victims identified the two suspects, and a Brazilian woman has said she'd also been assaulted by the pair on March 23, the statement said.

In a Globo interview, commanding officer Alexandre Braga, head of the Rio police unit specializing in crimes against tourists, said the suspects had gone on a sex crime spree.

"The principal motive appears to have been the satisfaction of their lust," Braga said, adding that the robbery and other crimes appear to have been "secondary."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Posited motive

"The characteristics ... lead us to believe that they wanted to have a 'party of evil.'"

Commanding officer Alexandre Braga, who heads the Rio police unit specializing in crimes against tourists.

Travel destination?

The incident raises new questions about security in Rio, which has cracked down on once-endemic drug violence in preparation for hosting future events.

- Rio's schedule. The city will play host to World Youth Day, a Roman Catholic pilgrimage expected to draw some 2 million people in late July; next year's soccer World Cup; and the 2016 summer Olympic games.
- Statistics. In Brazil, more than 5,300 cases of sexual assault were reported between January and June 2012, according to the country's Health Ministry.

SALES REPRESENTATIVE

Metro Saskatoon is seeking an individual to achieve regional targets for print & online and other performance metrics by developing new business.

PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITIES:
- Manage and grow an assigned retail sales territory
- Design advertising programs to reflect clients' objectives
- New Business Development
- Creatively negotiate rates
- Sell a portfolio of Metro branded products

REQUIREMENTS OF THE POSITION:
- Post secondary education in a related field
- 3 years experience in sales/media sales
- Proficient in Microsoft Office applications
- Creative, efficient, flexible & detail oriented
- Strong verbal and written communication skills
- Proven track record in profitable selling

Interested individuals who possess the skills described above are requested to submit their resume and cover letter via email to hr@metronews.ca no later than April 20, 2013. PLEASE QUOTE: "Sales Representative - Saskatoon" in the subject line. All submissions will be treated as confidential.

metro

France considers widening its ban on religious garb

A vendor sets up his stall on the first day of the 30th annual Meeting of Muslims in France, Europe's largest Muslim convention, on Friday in Le Bourget. REMY DE LA MAUVINIERE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

French President Francois Hollande wants a new law that could extend restrictions on the wearing of prominent religious symbols in state jobs into the private sector. His new tack comes after a top French court ruled in March that a day-care operator that gets some state funding unfairly fired a woman in a headscarf, sparking a political backlash.

Many Muslims and even some Roman Catholics and Jews fear France's insistence on secular values — first enshrined in the French Revolution more than two centuries ago — is unfairly crimping their ability to express their beliefs. They also worry that Hollande's government wants to score political points.

"Islam has become a political instrument," said Samia Kaddour, 26, a community activist. She has all but given up hope for a state job but is not yet discouraged enough to leave.

"I'm not a foreigner. I'm French," she said. "I love this country ... even if it has trouble liking us." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

French law

France bars state employees from wearing prominent religious symbols such as Muslim headscarves, Jewish skullcaps or large Christian crosses in public schools, welfare offices or other government facilities.

- Two years ago, France banned Muslim veils that cover the face from being worn in public.

fido

We've boosted the value, not the price.

$39 per month[1]

3X the Canada-wide minutes
2X the data
and so much more

- 450 Canada-wide daytime minutes[2]
- 400 MB of data[3]
- Unlimited international Text, Picture and Video Messaging[4]
- Unlimited Canada-wide evenings from 6 p.m. & weekends[2]
- Call Display, Voicemail[5] and, of course, no activation fees

Includes the Fido ADVANTAGE

Tab24 NEW • Fido LiveANSWERS™ • FidoTRADE™ • FidoDOLLARS™

It's time to switch. Visit a store, call 1-866-301-3436 or go to fido.ca.

FIDO STORES

8th and Arlington
Centre at Circle and Eighth
Midtown Plaza

FUTURE SHOP · Tbooth wireless · Walmart · THE MOBILE SHOP (Exclusively where President's Choice® products are sold.) · COSTCO WHOLESALE · WIRELESS etc... · BEST BUY · LONDON DRUGS · WIRELESSWAVE

Offer subject to change without notice. Comparative claims based on Fido Smart plan offered in March 2013. 1. Smart plans available monthly or with a 2-year Fido Agreement. Additional long distance, roaming, data, add-ons, provincial 9-1-1 fees (if applicable) and taxes are extra & billed monthly. 2. Airtime includes calls from Canada to Canadian numbers only, billed by the minute. Each additional minute costs 45¢ (20¢ for Call Forwarding). 3. Additional data: $5/200 MB, charged in $5 increments. Data transmission charges of 3¢/kB apply when roaming (0.6¢/kB in the U.S.). 4. Plan includes messages sent from Canada to Canadian, U.S. and international wireless numbers. Sent/received premium messages (alerts, messages related to content and promotions) and messages sent while roaming not included and charged at applicable rates. 5. Service includes up to 3 messages, each 3 minutes in length that can be saved up to 3 days. © 2013

Boy Scouts. Application for troop sponsored by gay-rights group denied

The Boy Scouts of America has rejected an application for a scouting troop sponsored by a Utah gay-rights organization.

The Utah Pride Center asked permission to start a troop for 10 middle-school-aged children with straight troop leaders, said executive director Valerie Larabee. Many of the boys' parents had left Scouts or opted not to join because of their opposition to their long-standing policy excluding gay men and women.

After spending four months preparing a proposal to adhere to Scouts' standards, Utah Pride Center officials said their entire application was returned intact four days later — including the business cards they included.

They were told that the mission of their organization didn't properly align with the goals of Boy Scouts, said Utah Pride Center's director of community engagement.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York

Archbishop says Church should be more open to gays

The archbishop of New York says the Roman Catholic Church has to make sure that its defence of marriage is not reduced to an attack on gays.

Cardinal Timothy Dolan says the church could work on being more welcoming to gays and lesbians. He says the church tries its "darnedest to make sure we're not an anti-anybody."

Dolan made the remarks Sunday on the ABC News program This Week. Dolan says he would tell gay men and lesbians that God loves them and they're entitled to friendship. But he says marriage is a union between a man and a woman "where children can come about naturally."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Prosecutors want death penalty for Holmes

Colorado theatre shooting. The defence is expected to argue suspect is not guilty because he was legally insane at the time

Prosecutors on Monday said they will seek the death penalty against the man accused in last year's movie-theatre attack that killed 12, injured 70 and spurred new gun-control laws in Colorado.

The much-anticipated disclosure came in a court hearing held four days after prosecutors publicly rejected an offer by James Holmes' attorneys that the former neuroscience graduate student would plead guilty to avoid execution. Prosecutors had said the proposal wasn't a valid plea-bargain offer.

The decision to seek execution will delay the start of the trial until at least February, and the judge acknowledged even that might not be enough time for all sides to prepare. The trial had been planned to begin in August.

"It's my determination and my intention that in this case for James Eagan Holmes justice is death," Arapahoe County District Attorney George Brauchler said at the Monday hearing. He spoke quietly and deliberately without any hesitation.

There was no audible reaction from Holmes, whose parents sat side by side, clutching hands with fingers intertwined.

They were quiet, as were the victims in the courtroom when Brauchler disclosed his decision.

Bryan Beard, whose best friend was killed in the attack, sat in an overflow courtroom. "I had a huge adrenaline rush," he said. "I love the choice, I love it, I love it.... I hope I'm in the room when he dies."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This March 12 photo shows James Holmes, Aurora theatre-shooting suspect, in the courtroom during his arraignment in Centennial, Colo.

RJ SANGOSTI/DENVER POST/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HELP ME BUILD A BRIGHTER FUTURE
PLEASE DONATE
Donate today by visiting friendsofcmhr.com or call 1.866.828.9209
Friends of THE CANADIAN MUSEUM FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

Watchdog to examine 'muzzling' of scientists

Taxpayer-funded research. Better access to information needed, advocacy group says

Federal policies that restrict what government scientists can say publicly about their work are about to be put under the microscope.

Federal Information Commissioner Suzanne Legault has agreed to investigate how government communications rules on taxpayer-funded science impact public access to information.

Legault is responding to a detailed complaint lodged by the Environmental Law Centre at the University of Victoria and the ethics advocacy group Democracy Watch.

Their lengthy report — Muzzling Civil Servants: A Threat to Democracy? — laid out repeated examples of taxpayer-funded science being suppressed or limited to prepackaged media lines across six government departments and agencies.

In a letter to the complainants, the commissioner's office noted she is required under the Access to Information Act to investigate any matter related to obtaining or requesting records.

The complaint alleges that by keeping government scientists from speaking out about their work, the government is denying the public the chance to request records — because no one is ever made aware they exist in the first place.

Suzanne Legault THE CANADIAN PRESS

The complaint "alleges that the right of access to information under the act is impeded by government policies, practices or guidelines that restrict or prohibit government scientists from speaking with the media and the Canadian public," Legault's office responded, saying it "falls with the scope" of the legislative mandate.

In addition to four government departments and two agencies cited in the complaint, Legault said she will also examine the Treasury Board Secretariat "because of its role in relation to the development and implementation of government policies."

Chris Tollefson, the executive director of UVic's law centre, said its research into suppressed science revealed the wide scope of the practice and how it "represents a significant departure" in government practice over the past five to seven years.

"It really is a core issue in terms of the health of our democracy," Tollefson said in an interview. "We need to know what the best science is as we make difficult decisions about policy."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper's government has been accused of silencing scientists on a number of subjects, particularly environmental science, since the Conservatives came to power in 2006. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Discontent

"We have indications that there is very, very broad discontent amongst scientists about being muzzled and having their research suppressed."

Calvin Sandborn, legal director of Victoria's Environmental Law Centre

MacKay welcomes baby boy

Defence Minister Peter MacKay and his wife, Nazanin Afshin-Jam, hold their new baby boy, Kian Alexander MacKay, on Monday. The child, weighing eight pounds, two ounces, is the couple's first. THE CANADIAN PRESS/HANDOUT

River rescue. Edmonton man recounts pulling two girls out of water

After rescuing two young girls from the icy North Saskatchewan River on Sunday, a "starving" Adam Shaw and his dog, Rocky, each enjoyed a hamburger.

The meal was well deserved after a simple afternoon walk turned into a dramatic river rescue for the 27-year-old and his dog.

Shaw, his wife and two children were walking in Edmonton's Rundle Park on Sunday afternoon when the family heard screams coming from a footbridge below.

They looked down to see a girl floating in the river and another child trying to help her out.

Shaw yelled at the girls to stay put as his wife called 911 and he ran to the river.

By the time Shaw and Rocky reached the children, the second girl was also in the water and Shaw was able to pull her out.

Rocky and Shaw then set to work pursuing the girl who had "floated quite a ways down the river" and was in obvious distress.

Both dog and man fell in the water while in pursuit and eventually Rocky swam to the girl, who managed to grab hold of his leash.

Adam Shaw and Rocky RYAN TUMILTY/METRO

He swam her back to the shoreline where Shaw pulled both the girl and his dog onto the ice.

The group was soon met by Edmonton Fire Rescue.

"I just really didn't want to fail ... I really wanted to save them," Shaw said on Monday.

A day after the dramatic river rescue, the pair were hailed as heroes and presented an honorary helmet and a big bone by Edmonton Fire Rescue. ANNALISE KLINGBEIL/METRO IN EDMONTON

Quebec resident

Missing traveller's friends have hope

Friends of a Quebec man who vanished while driving home through Mexico's dangerous north say they're confident they'll find him and bring him home.

Marc Menard has not been heard from in more than two weeks.

The 44-year-old husband and father was returning to Canada after a three-month stay in Mexico. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Surgery rumours

Lung live Pope Francis

Does the pope have only one lung?

Despite erroneous reports that Pope Francis has lived most of his life with just one lung, surgery actually removed only the upper part of his right lung, and his friends and family say he remains in good health for a 76-year-old man.

The Buenos Aires archdiocese and the Vatican have declined to provide medical reports on the matter. THE CANADIAN PRESS

That's nuts! Shell-shocked Iranians boycott pistachios in Facebook-driven protest

This should be the time of year that nut-shop owners count their profits, after the recent Persian new year holiday when Iranians scarf up huge amounts of their iconic snack, pistachios. Instead, those in the trade are staring at piles of unsold nuts.

An Iranian man looks at pistachios for sale at a nut shop in Tehran. EBRAHIM NOROOZI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iranians have rebelled against a nut that is as linked to their national identity as apple pie is to America's or feta cheese to Greece's. A Facebook-driven boycott of pistachios has taken off, protesting prices that more than doubled in recent months.

The beloved pistachio has become another casualty of Iran's sanctions-battered economy. The embracing of the boycott reflects the public dismay over inflation now at 30 per cent.

The government, which usually tries to contain Iranians' anger over the economy, has heartily backed the pistachio boycott. Authorities say fewer nuts consumed at home means more available to sell abroad. Initially, the government in February responded to anger over the rising prices by banning exports of pistachios to increase stocks at home and reduce prices. But it quickly reversed course, lifting the ban within a week and subsequently backing the boycott when it was launched.

Iran is the world's No. 2 producer of pistachios after the United States, and together the two rivals overwhelmingly dominate the world market in the nut. The U.S. reimposed a ban on Iranian pistachio imports in 2010, but it had little effect on Iran's sales since its main customers are in Asia, Europe and the Arab world. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PST returns. B.C. eateries lost $1.5B under HST: Group

The provincial sales tax is back in force in British Columbia, after the harmonized sales tax was wiped out overnight, and the province's restaurant sector is delighted to return to its lower-tax status.

The western vice-president of the Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association says the combined 12 per cent tax was tough on the bottom line of an already-suffering industry.

Mark von Schellwitz says restaurant business in B.C. grew just 1.4 per cent since the HST was imposed three years ago, while the rest of Canada grew more than 11 per cent in the same period.

Von Schellwitz estimates the tax cost B.C. eateries $1.5-billion in lost sales. He says with the levy gone, the restaurant industry is projected to grow 5.1 per cent in 2013. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coney Island hopes for rebound after Sandy

Still looking for rebirth. Library closed, post office partially open, more than two dozen unsalvageable buildings will need to be demolished

A visitor poses Saturday at New York's Coney Island. Despite making the traditional Palm Sunday opening, many of the seasonal businesses are still reeling from the aftermath of Superstorm Sandy. MARY ALTAFFER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At the beginning of each tourist season, the entrepreneurs who pitch the thrill rides, hotdogs, sideshows and souvenirs at gritty Coney Island gather along its famous boardwalk to pray for two things: Good weather and large crowds.

Never have they prayed harder than now.

Five months after Superstorm Sandy's surge swamped New York City's most storied beach destination, many businesses are pinning their hopes on a strong season to help them make up for the hundreds of thousands of dollars they have spent to get back up and running. "We're almost dead, but we're open," said D.J. Vourderis, whose family owns and operates Deno's Famous Wonder Wheel Amusement Park.

The late October storm ravaged Vourderis' business, and he was forced to replace all the corroded relays, circuits, breakers and wiring on the Ferris wheel. The family has borrowed to stay afloat and is about $500,000 in the red.

Some Coney Island staples that have been shut since the hurricane have no choice. The flagship Nathan's Famous hot dog stand won't reopen until Memorial Day. The New York Aquarium will reopen, only partially, in late spring. And the Brooklyn Cyclones baseball team is set for its June 18 home opener, though it's unclear whether its damaged field will be replaced with sod or artificial turf.

The strongmen and sword swallowers who perform at the Coney Island Circus Sideshow will be out of work until May 24, when owner Dick Zigun is able to open the first floor of the landmark building. But after tallying $400,000 in damage from Sandy, Zigun's non-profit Coney Island USA is hard-pressed to pay for this summer's Mermaid Parade, an annual gathering of more than 1,500 people marching in wacky costumes to celebrate the kooky culture of Coney Island. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Carneys

"We're moving forward, even though it's questionable.... We are savvy Coney Island carneys; once we reopen, we are damn good at making money."

Dick Zigun, owner of the Coney Island Circus Sideshow.

Come one, come all

Nearly 11 million people flocked to Coney Island Beach last year between Memorial Day and Labor Day, city figures show.

- Many visitors attended well-known attractions, like the Nathan's Famous July 4 International Hot Dog-Eating Contest.
- Most of Coney Island's boardwalk bars, shops and restaurants are now open to sell cold beers, tchotchkes and fried clams.

Nationalistic attacks?

Apple issues apology in China

Apple has issued an apology to Chinese consumers after government media attacked its repair policies for two weeks.

State broadcaster CCTV and the People's Daily had portrayed Apple as just the latest Western firm to exploit the Chinese consumer. But the attacks were mocked by the increasingly sophisticated Chinese consumers who revere Apple and its products. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Housing bubble

It's official: Calif. city is bankrupt

A judge accepted the California city of Stockton's bankruptcy application on Monday, making it the most populous city in the U.S. to enter bankruptcy. Salaries, benefits and borrowing in the city of nearly 300,000 people were based on anticipated long-term developer fees and increasing property tax revenue. But those were lost in a flurry of foreclosures.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.S. pot laws bring big biz to B.C. shop

Sonny Chambers, assistant manager of Green Planet Wholesale Ltd., adds fertilizer powder to a water tank at the hydroponics company's shop in Surrey, B.C. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seeing the green.
Sales quadruple at hydroponics company after Washington and Colorado legalize weed

Business has been on fire at a Surrey, B.C., hydroponics shop since the decision was made by two U.S. states to legalize the possession of marijuana.

The ballot initiatives passed last November in Washington and Colorado allow adults over the age of 21 to possess up to 28 grams of marijuana.

Steven Betts, co-owner of Green Planet Wholesale Ltd., says sales have quadrupled in the past few weeks. The multi-million-dollar business now employs about 60 people.

Betts says his company has plans to open a new distribution facility in Washington in the next few months.

Prof. Stephen Easton, who teaches economics at Simon Fraser University, says the company's success could draw the attention of competitors, such as big-box stores, especially if the owners are seeing large margins.

Green Planet's owners say it's not about doing anything illegal, and there's a sign near the store's checkout counter that warns customers they'll be asked to leave if they mention any illegal substances.

"We've never been about doing things illegally," Betts said. "We're not martyrs. We don't try to be radicals or rebels. We're really about how to garden and how to garden efficiently."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Environment. Costly cleanup of toxic site squeezing funds for similar projects: Report

Cleanup costs at a single northern mine next to Great Slave Lake are ballooning so high they are forcing Ottawa to rethink plans for thousands of contaminated sites across the country.

Documents obtained by northern environmentalists show the government expects the cost of cleaning up the Giant Mine just outside Yellowknife to be nearly a billion dollars — perhaps the largest single environmental cleanup in Canada, paid for entirely by taxpayers.

Initial estimates for safely dealing with the huge site, which includes a toxic smorgasbord of buildings, tailings ponds and a quarter-million tonnes of arsenic stored underground, were about $488 million.

A federal progress report on the project says costs have risen as more becomes known about the scale of the problem.

"The increase in estimated costs occurred as a result of the normal progression through the preliminary phases of the remediation project (... increased site information and detail obtained over time)," the report says.

Rising labour and equipment costs are also part of the problem. So is the current state of the mine, which is so bad that emergency measures need to be taken this summer before large amounts of arsenic start escaping from collapsing buildings.

The official price tag of $903 million could get higher yet.

"There is a potential for the total project cost estimates to increase over time," says the report, which uses figures as of March 2012.

The costs are already squeezing funding for other federal cleanups.

The Giant Mine remediation project is funded from a federal program for contaminated sites. Beginning in 2005, a total of $3.6 billion over 15 years has been earmarked for the program.

That was supposed to be enough for 6,765 known toxic sites, including 2,709 "priority" sites. They include the Lennard Island lighthouse off the coast of Vancouver Island and Rock Bay in Victoria Harbour.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Warning: Graphic content.
Toronto-area student deemed 'sadist' by judge

"The reason I broke up with my ex three months ago is cuz I was afraid for her safety," the 17-year-old high-school student typed in a Facebook chat last December.

"I'm not scared," replied the 16-year-old girl he'd met during a school band performance three days before.

"I'm not telling you to be afraid of me," he told her. "Just cautious."

Then he proceeded to describe a series of gruesome and violent sexual acts he'd like to perform on her, leading an Ontario Court Justice to label the teen a "sadist" and find him guilty of threatening bodily harm.

The case hinged on the "relationship of intention and desire," Justice Joseph De Filippis wrote in his ruling issued last month. The teen, who cannot be identified under the Youth Criminal Justice Act, was arrested at a high school in the Greater Toronto Area on Dec. 7 after the girl reported the Facebook conversation to her teacher.

In his backpack, a police officer found a handwritten note, topped in large block letters with the words: "KILLER RAPE DEATH."

"I can only get pleasure, sexual pleasure, if the female is undergoing extreme pain, being raped, abused, tortured or simply crying," the note read.

Similar to the Facebook chat, the note details a fantasy of cutting, beating, breaking the legs of and raping a girl in a room, "probably the soundproof music room."

The female complainant told the court that the Facebook chat left her feeling "a little creeped out" at first. When she reread it the next morning, she became frightened of what the guy she'd once thought was "nice" might do to her.

"I have no doubt these words were meant to be taken seriously," De Filippis wrote. "Indeed, I am confident he derived pleasure from the threats themselves."

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Online etiquette

Website tracks damaging tweets

What kind of tweets could get you fired?

Well, tweeting that you hate your job, hate your boss and want your co-workers killed could do the trick.

A new website tracks people who cross the line.

The website FireMe! (fireme.l3s.uni-hannover.de) has developed a detection system to measure the likelihood of your getting fired if your boss reads the tweet.

People's tweets are tracked based on four categories: Haters, Horrible Bosses, Sexual Intercourse and Potential Killers.

The website includes a tool called The FireMeter!, which determines on a percentage basis how likely you are to get fired.

The FireMeter! also allows you to enter another person's Twitter username to see how exposed they are to getting fired.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

IT'S OK TO LOSE THE BOOZE

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

"Whyyyyy aren't you drinking?" the birthday girl slurred as she glared at me from behind her heavy mascara-coated lashes. "I'm on antibiotics," I lied, because simply not being in the mood wasn't going to cut it as an excuse. For this birthday-girl booze-hound, it wasn't enough to show up to the party; I was expected to toast the occasion with a second, third and fourth drink to show my solidarity.

While peer-pressure-related alcohol consumption might seem like an issue relegated to the teenage house party and university campus, the social expectations surrounding drinking are still very much present in our post-collegiate years and beyond. There seems to be a slew of social events that require us to indulge in a few drinks in the name of friendship. From weddings and birthday parties to bachelorette weekends, it's difficult to avoid the social lubricant of choice without drawing attention to yourself.

But if you keep track of those casual drinks throughout the week — a glass of wine with dinner, cocktails with friends after work, a couple of mimosas with brunch — they start to add up. The recommendation for women is no more than seven alcoholic beverages a week —for guys it's double that — but how many of us are going over that, more often than not?

Any time I've tried to commit to a defined period of sobriety, I've failed. Not because I have a "problem," but because I tend to give in to friends who insist I join them in a glass of something or other to celebrate, commiserate or simply unwind after a long week. It's not that it's so hard to say no. It's just a lot easier to say yes. Drinking is such a ritualized part of social behaviour that abstaining usually results in being subjected to an inquisition.

But it's not just friends who lay on the pressure when it comes to alcohol. Joining your colleagues in knocking back a few drinks is a common expectation in many professional settings. In some instances, the choice to remain sober can leave you at a professional disadvantage. Mention that you'd prefer to avoid the bar during a work function or networking event and it immediately sends up a red flag that you're not being a team player.

Raising a glass might help to elevate your social capital among friends and colleagues, but there are countless benefits to saying no. You'll save money, improve your health and realize that Sunday mornings are full of potential when you don't have to worry about hangovers and the "Who did I drunk-text last night?" demons.

Drinkers love company, of course, but it's important to remember that all the skinny-girl margaritas in the world aren't going to make you a better friend.

Follow Jessica Napier on Twitter @MetroSheSays

Morning-after reckoning

Sunday mornings are full of potential when you don't have to worry about hangovers and the "Who did I drunk-text last night?" demons.

ZOOM

Motown piano signed, sealed, delivered

MAX ORTIZ/THE DETROIT NEWS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Welcome back to 'Hitsville, U.S.A.'

Piano technician Billy Brasile installs a keyboard cover on an 1877 Steinway grand piano used by Motown greats during the label's 1960s heyday. The prized Steinway, restored thanks to Paul McCartney, was moved back into Studio A on Monday at what is now the Motown Historical Museum in Detroit, or "Hitsville, U.S.A."

McCartney, a longtime fan of the Motown sound who recorded several of the label's songs with the Beatles, told museum officials in 2011 that he wanted to help with the piano's refurbishment after learning the historic instrument — used by Stevie Wonder, Marvin Gaye and other Motown legends — no longer could be played.

The piano was moved to New York for repairs, and the work was completed last August. In September, McCartney and Motown founder Berry Gordy, pictured right, played it together at a charitable event at Steinway Hall in New York City.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOTOWN MUSEUM/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Clickbait

ANDREW FIFIELD
andrew.fifield@metronews.ca

Twitter may impose a limit of 140 characters, but even that tiny bit of text can be tedious if you're simply in the mood for photos of famous people. Follow these accounts to simplify your gawking:

@CelebsTogether:
A steady supply of famous faces hanging out together that wisely steers clear of paparazzi and promo shots in favour of black-and-white surprises such as Charlie Chaplin with Gandhi or Colonel Sanders meeting Alice Cooper.

@si_vault:
Sports Illustrated's endless collection of famous images, delightfully interlaced with rarer fare such as a young Wayne Gretzky signing autographs while wearing a truly ghastly fur coat.

@Twisitor:
A camera in the lobby of Twitter's San Francisco office captures the well-coiffed tech stars who regularly visit, giving you a chance to put a face to the guy using the handle you wish were yours.

Comments

metronews.ca

RE: Justin Bieber's Monkey Quarantined in Germany, published April 1

Wow...I just figured it out, JB is Michael Jackson! Pop star, great dance moves and nuts.
Google posted to metronews.ca

RE: Friend or Food? Vancouver Humane Society Bus Ads Compare Pups to Piglets, published April 1

As soon as I saw this bus ad, all I wanted to do was put a giant decal on it that said "Because Bacon."
Kevin Dykstra posted to

RE: Four-year-old Crashes Car into McDonald's at Jane and Finch, published April 1

If people got tickets for being stupid there would be a shortage of paper.
Xavier Leveque posted to metronews.ca

RE: Georgia Woman's Camera Washes Ashore in Taiwan, published March 27

Awesome!! I lost my camera in the Bahamas. I hope someone finds it!!
Skippy76 posted to metronews.ca

WE WANT TO HEAR FROM YOU: Send us your comments: saskatoonletters@metronews.ca

metro

President Bill McDonald • Vice-President & Group Publisher, Metro Western Canada Steve Shrout • Editor-in-Chief Charlotte Empey • Deputy Editor Fernando Carneiro • National Deputy Editor, Digital Quin Parker • Managing Editor, Saskatoon Tara Campbell • Managing Editor, News & Business Amber Shortt • Managing Editor, Life & Entertainment Dean Lisk • Sales Manager Barry Paton • Vice-President, Sales and Business Development Tracy Day • Vice-President, Creative Jeff Smith • Vice-President, Finance Phil Jameson METRO SASKATOON • #100, 728 Spadina Crescent East Saskatoon, Sask. S7K 4H7 • Telephone: 306-649-2025 • Toll free: 1-877-895-7193 • Fax: 1-888-895-6931 • Advertising: adinfosaskatoon@metronews.ca • Distribution: saskatoon_distribution@metronews.ca • News tips: saskatoon@metronews.ca • Letters to the Editor: saskatoonletters@metronews.ca

Bears on board! Leather yoga pants! Firms yuk it up for April Fools' Day

Gotcha! Brands try to flex their funny bones with goofy mock ads

WestJet's April Fools' Day video promoted its "furry family" program, which purports to allow travelling pets of all kinds to roam free in the cabin. YOUTUBE SCREEN GRAB

Canadian companies sought to generate some good-natured brand buzz Monday by releasing their 2013 April Fools' Day ads.

This year's participants included WestJet, the Toronto Transit Commission, Lululemon and Boston Pizza.

York University professor Russell Belk says well-executed humour can go viral and attract lots of mainstream media attention — but warns that those missing the mark risk offending.

He says newspapers have run April Fools' stories for decades, but social media can accelerate how widespread the best ads are seen.

Belk points to Calgary-based WestJet, whose tongue-in-cheek ads last year promoted kid-free planes. This year the airline says it's allowing any kind of animal, including bears, to roam free on board.

Meanwhile, the TTC released a video spoofing annoying things passengers do on the subway. It promoted a personal subway car that allows riders to apply makeup, do personal grooming and use seats for bags and to stretch their legs.

Lululemon said it was introducing lululeather after partnering with local cow farmers who feed their animals organic grass and chia seeds. In addition to Cowabunga yoga pants, it would also offer Moomats for exercise at $208 apiece.

Boston Pizza said it was banning all buns and replacing them with new uses for pizza dough. Several ads on YouTube said it was adding pizza salad, pizza beer and pizza cake to its menu. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A video still of Lululemon's gag ad about a new line of leather yoga pants and mats. YOUTUBE SCREEN GRAB

More April 1 fun

- Scores of businesses in Britain and the U.S. have also issued April 1 news releases or videos.
- Google videos promoted new services such as Google Nose, which lets users scan the web for smells, and a new feature on Google Maps that allows people to search for pirate treasure.

New Delhi

India's top court issues landmark drug ruling

India's Supreme Court on Monday rejected drug maker Novartis AG's attempt to patent an updated version of a cancer drug in a landmark decision that health activists say ensures poor patients around the world will get continued access to cheap versions of lifesaving medicines. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Market Minute

DOLLAR 98.36¢ (-0.07¢)

TSX 12,695.14 (-54.76)

OIL $97.07 US (-16¢)

GOLD $1,600.90 US (+$5.20)

Natural gas: $4.04 US (+2¢)
Dow Jones: 14,572.85 (-5.69)

Smokers can use nicotine replacement longer: FDA

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration says smokers who are trying to quit can safely use over-the-counter nicotine gum, patches and lozenges for longer than previously recommended in a move to help millions of Americans kick the habit.

Current labels suggest consumers stop smoking or using other products containing nicotine when they begin using the products to help them quit and that they should stop using nicotine-replacement products after 12 weeks at most.

By the numbers

45M

More than 45 million Americans smoke cigarettes and about half try to quit every year, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The federal agency said Monday that the makers of gum and other nicotine-replacement products can change the labels that say not to smoke when using the products. The FDA also said the companies can let consumers know that they can use the products for longer periods as part of a plan to quit smoking, as long as they are talking to their doctor.

Nicotine-replacement products, designed to help people stop smoking by supplying controlled amounts of nicotine to ease the withdrawal symptoms, were first approved about 30 years ago and have gone from prescription to over-the-counter within the last 17 years. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Online travel data

American Airlines, Orbitz settle suits

American Airlines says it has settled lawsuits with Orbitz over the online travel agency's display of flights and fares. The airline has been fighting with Orbitz and other firms that distribute information to travel agents, saying it can better tailor offers if it provides information directly to the agents. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

American Greetings

Greeting card co. to be taken private

American Greetings has agreed to be taken private by a group led by some of its top executives in a deal that values the company at about $580 million US. In addition to its namesake brand, American Greetings Corp. also owns Carlton Cards, Recycled Paper Greetings and Papyrus. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bailout deal

Cyprus gets extra year to hit surplus

Cyprus' government spokesman says the country has been granted an extra year — until 2017 — to achieve a targeted budget surplus of four per cent as part of negotiations with international lenders for a rescue package. Government negotiators still hope to extend that by a further year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAKE CARE OF THAT SMILE FOR O

From feeling unconfident to wanting to look our best on your wedding day, first date or class reunion, many of has have experienced those moments when we're just not pleased with our teeth. But thanks to an ever-growing choice of teeth whitening products, you can be prouder of your smile and more confident about your appearance.

Over time, our teeth can become discoloured due to the natural aging process and the things we consume, including coffee, tea, red wine, blueberries, etc. Medications can also be to blame, for example, people who took tetracycline as part of their acne treatment. Whatever the cause, it's time to banish the less-than-white smile.

Your smile is usually the first thing people notice about you. Shiny, white teeth are indicative of someone who takes pride in his or her appearance. Not surprisingly, a white smile can speak volumes a job interview, where interviewers can been wowed by a lot more than a great resume.

Did you know that a whiter smile can make you feel and look more attractive to the opposite sex? According to a study by the American Academy of Cosmetic Dentistry, 96 per cent of respondents feel that having bright white teeth makes you more attractive to the opposite sex.

Even though you might not be destined

THE BENEFITS OF POWER VS. MANUAL BRUSHING

Although manual toothbrushes have become significantly more advanced over the years, many people have opted to trade in their classic brushes for powered ones. Why go for the power? In addition to the obvious answer that the brush does most of the work for you, here are a few other advantages:

- Gives you a better overall cleaning – The heads of electric toothbrushes are designed to rotate and whirl in ways that remove plaque from your teeth better and more quickly than manual ones. Power brushes also penetrate under the gum line which is helpful in reducing gingivitis.
- Is easier to handle and to hold – Larger, ergonomically designed handles make brushes easier to grip — a valuable feature for people who have arthritis, dexterity issues or carpal tunnel syndrome.
- Makes you brush for the right amount of time – Built-in timers let you know when you've brushed for two minutes (the time recommended by the Canadian Dental Association).
- Prevents over-brushing – Pressure sensors indicate if you're brushing too hard. Over-brushing can lead to tooth sensitivity and receding gums
- Provides a greener alternative – With electric brushes, you only need o replace the head once every three months instead of the entire brush.
- Offers other convenient features: Some electric brushes make the tooth brushing time even easier for you by automatically dispensing toothpaste for you. The one complaint you might hear about the power toothbrush is that it's more expensive than a manual toothbrush.

True, but isn't your long term oral health and well-being worth it?

"DID YOU KNOW THAT A WHITER SMILE CAN MAKE YOU FEEL AND LOOK MORE ATTRACTIVE?"

A WHITER SMILE FOR SPECIAL OCCASIONS

Whether you're about to walk down the aisle, getting ready for your high school prom, preparing for your first real job interview, or some other major event, there's one look that suits every occasion — whiter smile.

VERALL HEALTH

for Hollywood, a set of whiter teeth can make you feel like a star. True, your next starring role might be in a graduation picture or next your holiday party, but even so, a brighter smile can make all he difference in the world.

If you are thinking about whiter shade of white, there are a few options available, ranging in price from less han $20 up to about $2, 000.

Going to a professional

A dental professional cleans and removes of any plaque along your gum line. Once this is done, a peroxide-based gel is applied to your teeth followed by a special light that activates the gel. The process usually takes about an hour, and can whiten teeth several shades. The cost can range from $300 to $2,000 depending on the system, the technology, and the effort requied to achieve desired results.

Tailored whitening kits

Using impressions of your teeth the dental professional creates a tailored whitening tray and provides a peroxide-based teeth whitening gel to be used with the tray. Some can be worn at night, others during the day. Trays should be worn daily for optimal results. Customized trays can cost anywhere from $100 to $800.

Over-the-counter options

If you're watching your budget or don't have the time to visit your dentist you might want to try over-the-counter products like strips for whitening. You'll find these products at pharmacies, and drug and grocery stores where they range in price from $15 to $60. Although they do not offer the same whitening power as professional at-home bleaching kits, these products do produce noticeable results.

An important thing to remember is that the level of whiteness will vary among individuals. What works for a friend might not work for you. Talk to your dental professional to see if you're a good candidate for teeth whitening.

REASONS WHY IT'S IMPORTANT TO FLOSS

Consider dental floss one half of a powerful plaque-fighting duo that also includes the trusted toothbrush. If you think flossing doesn't need to be part of your daily oral health routine, here are six reasons to help change your mind.

Thwart tooth decay: Only dental floss can remove plaque from between your teeth where cavities can easily form.

Avoid gum disease: Flossing helps to prevent periodontal disease, which is one of the main causes of tooth loss.

Prevent tartar build-up: Flossing can slow down the accumulation of tartar.

Defend against bad breath: If plaque is left between your teeth, it will produce a bad smell in your mouth.

Reduce heart attack risk: Dangerous bacteria contained in plaque can enter the blood stream and cause heart disease.

Ready to get flossing? Talk to your dentist about what types of products will be most effective for you.

SCENE 2

Dwayne Johnson, at your beloved franchise's service

Role play. The man formerly known as The Rock talks about being Franchise Viagra and where he'd fit in some of Hollywood's most epic series

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

The last time we spoke to Dwayne Johnson, he said he'd earned the nickname "Franchise Viagra" because of his knack for injecting energy into lagging movie properties like the Fast and Furious and Journey to the Center of the Earth series.

He's at it again with G.I. Joe: Retaliation, grabbing the alpha position from Channing Tatum to lead America's coolest covert military force. So we thought we'd see how Johnson could be deployed for other famous franchises — some struggling, some not. To our delight, he gave the assignment a lot of thought.

"You've got to give it thought because all these franchises are so beloved, and all of them have their own built-in mythology and affinity that's global, which makes it very special," Johnson says.

"And it reminds me of when we were kids, how cool and fun big Hollywood movies can be."

With that in mind, here are his ideas:

Dwayne Johnson, left, is busy kicking ass in G.I. Joe Retaliation, which opened last Friday. HANDOUT

Forget CGI, all Dwayne Johnson needs is some green paint to become The Hulk. NED EHRBAR/MWN

Star Wars

"What is the cross between a Sith and a Jedi? I don't know. Is there something in between that has a bit more neutrality, who vacillates between both sides? Kind of like a grey area, possibly. Being such a big fan of Star Wars and the mythology of Star Wars, my inner boy, my inner geek — which is a big geek, by the way — embodies both sides. So back when I was eight years old I was both. And I don't know what that's called. What would that be?"

Star Trek

"My gut tells me we would have to create a character that puts not only the Enterprise but the entire (Federation) at risk in terms of destruction by one man. That's where I feel like we should go with that. And I love Star Trek, by the way, but it feels like that. That's heavy, right?"

Indiana Jones

"That's tough. I love George Lucas, obviously. I love Harrison (Ford). OK, I hunt him down. I hunt Indiana Jones down. When I hunt him down, there's a plot twist in there somehow where I then become the hero (laughs). And I share the hero mantle of Indiana Jones with Harrison Ford. Yes. Because of my eight-year-old inner-geek."

Twilight

"All hypothetical, right? All hypothetical. Because this is not now saying that The Rock wants to be in Twilight (laughs). In steps the most manliest, toughest son-of-a-bitch of a vampire the world has ever seen. He grabs Kristen Stewart, pushes aside Pattinson and quietly yet firmly says, 'We are now doing away with our boyhood ways.' Hypothetically."

American Pie

"Wow. Wow, I would say... I have no idea where I would fit in that. No clue, no clue."

Avengers

"I got it. I think I got it. I'm going to show you something right now (pulls out his phone). It is a great question to end on, because I have been thinking about this for some time. Sometimes there are moments in life where there are no words. This is one of those moments. And this is who I should be in the next Avengers (shows photo of himself dressed up as the Hulk for Halloween) No more CGI, just me."

How do I become a Dentist ?

Explore what you want to be and how to get there.

Visit CareerBear.com to learn more

YOUR SIMPLE ROUTINE TO A WHITER SMILE IN 1 DAY*.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Crest® 3D White™ Toothpaste fights cavities.

Get your smile in peak form with an oral health routine that will have you and your dentist grinning from ear to ear. And count on the 3D White collection as you prepare for the Oral Health Month Pledge coming this April, National Oral Health Month.

life opens up when you do Crest + Oral-B 3D WHITE

*When toothpaste, rinse, brush, and Whitestrips are used together. Satisfaction guaranteed. Return receipt and UPC within 60 days of purchase. Limit to one refund per person. Call 1-800-395-8423 (Crest 3D White, Whitestrips, Toothpaste, Rinse) and 1-866-585-7553 (Oral-B Power) for more information. To ensure these products are right for you, always read and follow the label.

DVD reviews

The End of Time

Director. Peter Mettler

Stars. Richie Hawtin, Peter Mettler

Does it really matter what time it is? The End of Time artfully explores the human construct of hours, minutes and days, arguing that nature doesn't need watches, clocks and calendars. The poetic lens of Toronto cinematographer/director Peter Mettler has previously inquired into such elusive subjects as personal fulfillment (Gambling, Gods and LSD) and the Northern Lights (Picture of Light). Now Mettler is after his most elusive prey yet: the very human concept of how we track our very existence. Following a global path that leads him from proto-astronaut Joseph Kittinger to proton-smashing physicists at CERN's Large Hadron Collider in Geneva, Switzerland, and from a Hawaiian lava watcher to Henry Ford's defunct Detroit assembly line, Mettler makes a profound statement on what makes all of us tick. It's of a piece with Patricio Guzmán's Nostalgia for the Light, another film that similarly finds miraculous unity in seemingly random things. Extras include a filmmaker's commentary.

Killing Them Softly

Director. Andrew Dominik

Stars. Brad Pitt, Ray Liotta, Richard Jenkins

The drained gangsters of Andrew Dominik's Killing Them Softly drink to excess and whore around, but achieve little satisfaction. Business has been bad lately. It's the fall of 2008 in post-Katrina New Orleans, and despite constant chatter about "the American promise" from presidential candidate Barack Obama, few people dream big. Mob hit man Jackie Cogan (Brad Pitt) is disgusted by what he sees. He still possesses a modicum of self-respect, but it's started to fade. There are elements of Scorsese's grime and Tarantino's wit in Killing Them Softly, and the story source is the 1974 novel Cogan's Game by George V. Higgins. But writer/director Dominik has his own methods. He's brilliant at using atmosphere and attitude. Bullets will eventually fly and blood will flow. The victims will hardly have time to feel pain. But the film makes its mark. Extras include deleted scenes and a making-of featurette.

PETER HOWELL

Taking time for Girl Talk with singer Kate Nash

Breakups and makeovers. English songstress says the end of a relationship fuelled her latest work

LINDA LABAN
Metro World News in Boston

Kate Nash. HANDOUT

Kate Nash arrived in New York two nights ahead of the February blizzard, but ran into the storm that is Fashion Week. Nash recorded her new album, Girl Talk, and filmed three movie roles last year, so it's not surprising that she already has a killer promo schedule — packed designer shows and DJing Teen Vogue's party, which morphed into actress Chloe Moretz's sweet 16 party. No jet lag slacking for the Brit singer/songwriter, that's clear.

"It's just a fun trip, really," says Nash of New York City's notoriously insane Fashion Week. If the 25-year-old sounds different this time, that's because she is.

She says the punky pop Girl Talk was fuelled by a breakup and her all-girl band. "Women connect with each other on an emotional level in a really big way. ... That was a really important thing for me over the last year, what with all the personal things I was going through." She uses the phrase "going through" in reference to the breakup. "The record itself is basically purging for me," she continues.

Nash has also revamped her style, with the key component of that word being "vamp."

She says she's not trying to be somebody she isn't, though.

"It's about making you feel good," she says.

METRO DISH

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Cory Monteith ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Substance addiction lands Glee's leading man in rehab

Glee star Cory Monteith has checked himself into rehab, according to Us Weekly. "Cory Monteith has voluntarily admitted himself into a treatment facility for substance addiction," his rep says in a statement. "He graciously asks for your respect and privacy as he takes the necessary steps towards recovery." While it isn't clear what substances exactly Monteith is looking for help avoiding, he has opened up about his drug use in the past, telling Parade magazine in 2011 that he used to do "anything and everything, as much as possible. I had a serious problem." The latest rehab stint has caught friends and family off-guard. "This is a total surprise," a source tells the magazine. "He has always been very honest about how he struggled."

Arnold Schwarzenegger

Maria Shriver

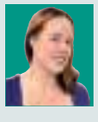
Arnie and Maria ease up on the drama for Easter

There didn't seem to be much tension between Arnold Schwarzenegger and Maria Shriver when the separated couple sat down this weekend for Easter brunch at a Santa Monica restaurant with their children, according to E! News. Dressed casually, Schwarzenegger and Shriver reportedly sat next to each other in a corner booth in Coast Cafe in the Shutters on the Beach hotel. While Schwarzenegger has admitted to hopes of a reconciliation with Shriver, he has reportedly been dating another woman, Heather Milligan, since the fall. Milligan was not present at the family brunch.

The Word

Shain Gandee has died at age 21. AMY SUSSMAN / INVISION/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Buckwild star Shain Gandee found dead

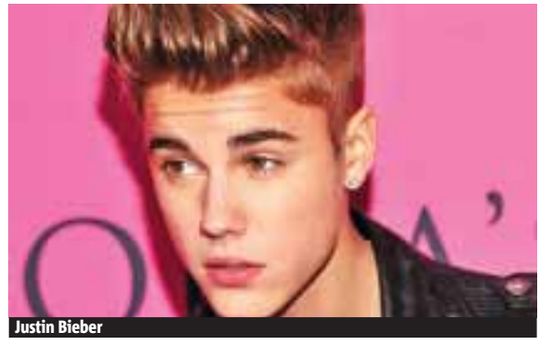


THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Shain Gandee, the former trash collector who found fame as the star of new MTV reality hit Buckwild, was found dead yesterday along with his uncle and an unidentified person in a vehicle in West Virginia Monday morning.

According to police officials, the vehicle was discovered at 11:30 a.m. Monday by a person on a four-wheeler, hours after Gandee and his group was reported missing. MTV released a statement about the situation.

"Our thoughts and prayers are with them," the network said about the Gandee family, adding that Shain "touched everyone he met and we will miss him dearly."



Justin Bieber

Bieber's being a bad boy, and it ain't good for business

The clock is ticking on Justin Bieber's career, according to top music manager Peter Mensch, who reps acts like Metallica and the Red Hot Chili Peppers. Mensch doesn't see much of a future for the Canadian pop star after a month of hospitalizations, cancelled concerts and dust-ups with the paparazzi. "His manager, Scooter Braun, is scared s—less. I don't know what Bieber's problem is. His career is over in three years anyway," Mensch tells the Sun. "I'd take Bieber to the woodshed and spank him."

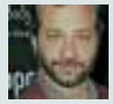
Amanda Bynes

Bynes unleashes Twitter barrage at former flames

Amanda Bynes continues to utilize her Twitter account to vent — and make her friends and family worry about her mental well-being. This weekend, Bynes posted a bizarre tirade of tweets aimed at her "exes," though she didn't name names. "When you write me on Twitter and I ignore you, it's because I plan on ignoring you on Twitter and in life forever," she wrote, along with, "If you were hot, I'd be so into you. Dedicated to my exes still tryna holla."

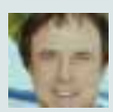
Twitter

@JonahHill
You guys ever have such an intense sex dream about Mr. Belvedere that you wake up screaming? Me neither! That would be so weird, right?!



@JuddApatow
I am worried about Beiber. He has a monkey now. I am not joking. This is headed to a bad place. He follows the path of generic disaster.

@pattonoswalt
Peter Dinklage is the Dowager Countess of Westeros. #GameofThrones



@kevin_nealon
Should i consult a doctor if my energy drink lasts longer than five hours?

We're just big bags of icky stuff, and other science facts

New book. Author of Gulp: Adventures on the Alimentary Canal takes on the gloppy, sticky part of digestion

SHAUN BRADY
Metro World News

Mary Roach built her career on exploring aspects of the human body that go overlooked by most writers.

In most cases, an interview subject suffering from a bad cough wouldn't be an ideal situation.

But it's oddly appropriate when the subject is Mary Roach, who can excuse herself with, "Speaking of mucoid substances, I'm launching some of them into your ear right now."

Roach has built her career on her delight in probing aspects of the science of the human body that most people would rather just ignore. In Stiff: The Curious Lives of Human Cadavers, she followed the body through its many strange post-mortem pathways; in Packing For Mars, she uncovered the less glorified side of the space program through zero-gravity toilets and long-term bed rest.

In her latest, Gulp: Adventures on the Alimentary Canal, Roach trains her sardonic, steel-stomached curiosity on the science of eating and digestion, finding laboratories where pet food is taste-tested, windows are opened onto a human stomach (literally), and those aforementioned mucoid substances are gathered and examined.

"It was the last taboo that I haven't covered," Roach says of her latest endeavour. CHRIS HARDY

"It was the last taboo that I haven't covered," Roach says of her latest endeavor.

"Once you take food off the table and put it into your body, it becomes an object of revulsion. People get very flipped-out and disgusted, so it's yet another topic that I thought it would be fun to pull apart and explore."

As with Bonk, her book about the science of sex, Roach is particularly fascinated by the way in which subjects that give us such pleasure have so many aspects we find utterly repulsive.

"We have a little bit of disgust for all of our biological processes," she says. "I don't think that eating is unique in that way — if you strip away love and lust and all the higher trappings of sex and you just take it down to what the bodies are doing and the substances involved, it becomes icky. Any time you peel away the skin and reveal the fact that we're just big bags of digesting, secreting, pumping, gloppy, sticky, icky stuff, it's upsetting."

Chow down

"Once you take food off the table and put it into your body, it becomes an object of revulsion."

Author Mary Roach
Talking about what you can find in her new book Gulp: Adventures on the Alimentary Canal

How to remember anything

You can't remember how many times you've lost your keys — that's how bad your memory is. Try these tips from Nelson Dellis, who just placed second at the USA Memory Championship.

Don't forget to remember these memory tips. ISTOCK PHOTO

1. Think in pictures.
The brain prefers pictures, not abstract images (numbers, names, concepts, etc). Turn whatever it is you are trying to remember into pictures.

2. Store them in a familiar place.
Take your home, and mentally walk through it while placing the pictures of what you are trying to memorize along a specific path.

3. Think crazy, bizarre, funny, gory, erotic.
Make those picture over the top and out of the ordinary. We remember those better.

4. Stay active.
Your brain needs blood to work smoothly. Staying fit keeps circulation to the brain at its best.

5. Eat right.
Include Omega 3 DHA in your diet. A lot of people think that fish is the only way to get DHA, but in fact there are vegetarian options. Try DHA Brain Armor, which is a DHA supplement for athletes.

METRO

Best Health

Spicing up your healthy living

BEST HEALTH MINUTE
Bonnie Munday
Editor-in-chief
Best Health Magazine

There's no need to shake on extra salt if you have spices as a pantry staple. There are countless health benefits, and in the latest issue of Best Health, freelancer Margaret Nearing looked at some of the most powerful spices.

Turmeric
The yellow pigment in turmeric comes from a component called curcumin, and it could reduce the pain of tendinitis, an inflammation of the tissue connecting muscle to bone.

Black pepper can help block fat cells from forming. ISTOCK PHOTOS

Black pepper
Piperine, the substance in black pepper that provides its flavour, can block formation of new fat cells.

Coriander seed
Researchers found the seed oil damages the membrane around bacteria cells, leading to the cell's death. The researchers see coriander oil as a future food additive.

TO CLAIM YOUR FREE COPY OF A FUTURE ISSUE OF BEST HEALTH MAGAZINE, GO TO BESTHEALTHMAG.CA/METRONEWS.

The pressure is on to make tasty spring-friendly risotto

Pressure cookers can be intimidating. They seem fussy — and scary! But you may be sold after you make risotto, a dish that by definition is tedious to make.

It simplifies the process and — most impressively — speeds it up. What normally takes 45 minutes in a traditional sauté pan is done and ready to serve in about 20.

Ingredients

- 2 tbsp extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 large shallot, chopped
- 1 cup Arborio rice
- 1/2 cup white wine
- 2 cups no-salt chicken broth
- Pinch of salt, plus more to taste
- Pinch of red pepper flakes
- 1 tbsp butter
- 1 cup small asparagus tips and tops, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 cup shredded Parmesan cheese
- 1/8 cup chopped fresh chives

This recipe serves four. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

1. In pressure cooker over medium, heat oil until shimmering. Add shallot and sauté for 3 minutes, or until translucent. Increase heat to high and add rice, stirring to coat. Toast the rice, stirring constantly, for 2 minutes. Add wine and cook until evaporated.

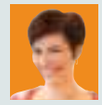
2. Add broth and pinch each of salt and red pepper flakes. Stir until mix comes to a simmer, then lock on pressure cooker's lid. Set timer, 9 minutes. Bring cooker up to full pressure, then reduce heat to maintain that level. Cook until timer goes off.

3. Take cooker off heat and wait 3 minutes, then put pot in sink and run cold water over it to release pressure. Open cooker; the rice should be creamy. Return pot to stovetop over medium heat. Add butter, asparagus, cheese and chives. Stir until heated through and butter and cheese have melted. Season with salt and pepper.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS / ELIZABETH KARMEL, AUTHOR OF THREE COOKBOOKS, INCLUDING SOAKED, SLATHERED AND SEASONED.

Health Solutions

Peas save Easter leftovers



NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert
DHN, RNCP
myfriendinfood.com

Easter is over and you are left with a few scraps of ham and a ham bone. Well, now, that sounds like pea soup.

Dried peas or legumes are delicious, nutritional powerhouses containing high amounts of fibre, protein and minerals including the liver cleansing one, molybdenum.

Given that you probably cleaned your house with (liver damaging) smelly chemicals for the holidays and then indulged in a whack of sugar (also liver damaging), a little molybdenum can go a long way. #StuffNutritionistsSay.

Dried split yellow peas have been consumed for millennia and they are the traditional variety chosen for French Canadian Pea Soup.

The process couldn't be simpler. Place ham bone and scraps into a slow cooker with 2 cups of dried yellow split peas and 10 cups of water or broth. Add one chopped onion, one chopped carrot, 2 bay leaves and a teaspoon of thyme. Go to work. In 8 hours or so you will have a thick, healthy, delicious soup. Freeze leftovers in single serving sizes and enjoy on each and every rainy day yet to come.

THERESA ALBERT IS A FOOD COMMUNICATIONS SPECIALIST AND PRIVATE NUTRITIONIST IN TORONTO. SHE IS @THERESAALBERT ON TWITTER AND FOUND DAILY AT MYFRIENDINFOOD.COM

Snack. Almond-Crusted Bake-Fried Asparagus

1. Heat the oven to 450 F. Set a wire rack over a rimmed baking sheet. Coat the rack with cooking spray.

2. In a very large bowl, whisk the egg whites until frothy. Set aside. In a medium bowl, mix together the almond flour, garlic powder, paprika, cumin, salt and pepper.

3. Place asparagus in the egg whites and gently roll or toss until all of the spears are coated and moistened. A few spears at a time, transfer the asparagus to the almond flour mixture. Roll the spears in the mixture until evenly and well coated. If needed, pat the coating on with your hands. Arrange the coated spears on the prepared rack. When all of the spears are on the rack, spritz them lightly with cooking spray.

4. Roast for 20 minutes, or until crispy and lightly browned. Serve. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 6 egg whites
- 1 1/2 cups almond flour
- 1 1/2 tsp garlic powder
- 1 1/2 tsp smoked paprika
- 1 1/2 tsp ground cumin
- 2 tsp kosher salt
- 3/4 tsp ground black pepper
- 2 bunches asparagus, tough bottoms trimmed

Forget the basic greens and reach for asparagus instead

With asparagus season upon us, this spring salad is an exciting and satisfying alternative to the basic green salad.

First, a couple of tips about buying the star of this show. At the store, asparagus should be stored vertically, stem down in ice or water. Make sure the tips are tight and smooth, not open and feathery, and that the stalks are firm and smooth.

Size-wise, go for the thicker guys.

Then it's onto the button mushrooms. Sure, they seem ordinary compared to their various designer cousins, but they're absolutely delicious. Just be sure to purchase only the firmest, whitest, tightest specimens.

You'll also toss in fresh flat-leaf parsley, and not merely as a garnish, but as a full partner to the other ingredients.

Lastly, we have pistachio nuts. They're great for their flavour, but — at only four calories per nut — they're also a boon to the diet-conscious.

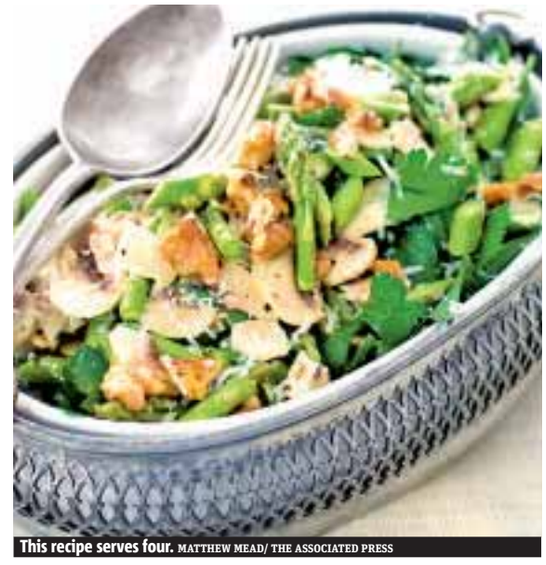
Of course, you could swap in walnuts, almonds, cashews or pecans if you wanted. They're all sources of healthy fat.

Ingredients

- Kosher Salt and ground black pepper
- 1 tbsp lemon juice
- 1 1/2 tsp extra-virgin olive oil
- 1/2 lb asparagus, tough stems trimmed and discarded (peeled if thicker than 1/3 inch)
- 1 cup flat-leaf parsley leaves
- 4 oz firm white button mushrooms, thinly sliced
- 1/3 cup pistachios or chopped toasted walnuts
- 1 oz shaved Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese

1. In a large bowl, combine a hefty pinch of salt, some black pepper and the lemon juice. Whisk until the salt is dissolved, then add the oil in a stream, whisking. Set aside.

2. Lay asparagus flat on cutting board and slice few stalks at a time very thin on a diagonal to create oblong slices.



This recipe serves four. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

3. Add to salad bowl along with parsley, mushrooms and pistachios or walnuts. Toss well to coat with the dressing.

4. Divide the salad among 4 serving plates and top each portion with some of the cheese. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/ SARA MOULTON, AUTHOR OF SARA MOULTON'S EVERYDAY FAMILY DINNERS

Real housewife of New Jersey tells it like it is in new book

Straight shooter. Caroline Manzo talks about her book, family life and reality TV

For all the table-flipping, name-calling and screaming on Bravo's The Real Housewives of New Jersey, there is a voice of reason among the cast. That belongs to Caroline Manzo, a straight shooter, happily married mother of three grown children.

Manzo can get worked up on the show, and she certainly holds her own in a battle, but for the most part, she seems irritated, if not bored, by the drama among her cast mates. One thing is evident — when Manzo speaks, everyone listens.

The 51-year-old reality star has expanded on her no-nonsense approach to life with a new book, Let Me Tell You Something: Life as a Real Housewife, Tough-Love Mother, and Street-Smart Businesswoman, written with Kevin Dickson and published by It Books.

Why did you decide to write a book?
I got the idea from the viewers. They ask me the same questions over and over again, and it's, "How do you manage to have three great children? How do you manage to have a close family, long marriage, happy marriage, backbone? How is it being in the public eye?" ... All I can say is what I've done in my life and that for me was the best way to answer the questions, through little anecdotes about my life.

You can tell on the show that you're very close with your family. Did you notice right away that people were very interested in knowing how you achieved that?
To this very moment I'm puzzled by the reaction to me and my family because I'm finding more and more that people find it unusual and it should be normal and that's what puzzles me. Why am I unusual? Why is my bond with my children abnormal? And that's what I find interesting.

This book isn't a tell-all. Did some people think you should make it one?
There are some people along the way that said, "It would sell more copies." Well, that to me is not success. I want the book to sell because people want to hear what I had to say about things and are truly interested in learning about me and my family and the process of being on Housewives, which I talk about. I don't bash anyone. I tell little behind-the-scenes anecdotes about Housewives. To say that something is a success because you were negative about somebody is not the way I operate.

Do you feel you've learned anything about yourself watching yourself on TV?
The greatest gift in the world is to see yourself on reality TV. Everybody says, "Oh, gee, I hate my voice! Oh my God, I'm so fat!" You know, beyond that, you learn tolerance and acceptance and things like that and you learn to look at yourself and say, "Gee, I could fix that about myself because it's just not cool." So sure, I've had a lot of lessons throughout the five years of being on television and in the public eye. And I'm grateful for it. You know, there were moments that I wanted to crawl under the covers and just die, but you know, so what? OK, I'm still here, it's OK.

Viewers who watch The Real Housewives think they know you because it's a reality show. Do they really?
I would say the viewers have a pretty good handle of who we are as people. However, you don't know all sides of us. We are each multifaceted individuals, so you see one angle of us, you don't see everything.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Caroline Manzo, one of the stars on The Real Housewives of New Jersey, has a new book titled Let Me Tell You Something: Life as a Real Housewife, Tough-Love Mother, and Street-Smart Businesswoman. GETTY IMAGES

What will be Lady Gaga's celebrity staying power? GETTY IMAGES

Dead or alive, for some celebrities fame just sticks

Reality TV stars may come and go, but a new study suggests true fame is enduring.

The research finds that people who achieve real celebrity remain famous for years, making frequent appearances in newspapers over periods of decades. The work bucks the widely held notion that fame is ephemeral, a belief held both by average individuals and by those who study the sociology of fame.

Eran Shor is an assistant professor of sociology at McGill University and is one of the authors of the study, which is published in the American Sociological Review.

He and his co-authors used large collections of newspaper archives that spanned decades to study the issue, looking at people in sports and politics and the field where fame is thought to be most fleeting — entertainment.

They found that even a dead celebrity like the eccentric billionaire Howard Hughes continues to feature in news articles long after his death.

"The large, large, large majority of people who get famous stay famous. For a long time. How long, it depends on how famous they got," Shor says.

Shor undertook the work with two colleagues from Stony Brook University, along with a software engineer from Google.

This portion of their ongoing work looks at figures in entertainment.

From a list of tens of millions of names that appeared in the entertainment sections of more than 2,000 newspapers between 2004 and 2009, a random sample of 100,000 names was drawn.

The names were then analyzed to see which appeared most often, with the top 10 from the sample selected for study. And then those names were tracked to see if people who were frequently written about for one year had sustained fame.

The top 10 were actors Jamie Foxx, Bill Murray, Natalie Portman, Tommy Lee Jones, Naomi Watts, John Malkovich, Adrien Brody and Steve Buscemi. Rounding out the group were music producer (and convicted murderer) Phil Spector and the late inventor and billionaire Howard Hughes.

"Here's a group of people that are fairly famous, but perhaps not the most famous of them all — and all of them stick. All of them stay around from year to year. We know who they are, the papers keep writing about them, they stay in some kind of a celebrity (mode). They didn't go away."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stuck in my head

"We're basically coming out and saying not only is fame not (fleeting), it's extremely sticky."

Eran Shor, assistant professor of sociology at McGill University

One small business, and one giant step for youth employment

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

Take an innovative restaurant in Toronto called The Depanneur, add in a guest program for young chefs-in-the-making, stir, season and serve up a dish that helps solve youth unemployment.

OK, maybe I'm stretching it a bit, but owner Len Senater is using his business to help young chefs, such as my daughter and recent graduate, Quinn Cruise, get started.

Recently, she created Japanese Hambaagu, a sushi rice bowl topped with slider-like Asian meatballs, creamy mushrooms, a fried egg, edamame and a side of Japanese pickle. Drooling yet?

The guest chef develops a dish, pays for the ingredients and keeps a portion of the take.

Supported by a volunteer sous-chef, well-known vegan and raw chef, Mary Hulbert, Quinn cooked up a storm and pocketed $175 before expenses.

This isn't just a make-work program. If every business were as creative as Senater's, unemployed or underemployed youth would have the opportunity to demonstrate their skills in the marketplace.

This very small business (affectionately called The Dep) offers up to 150 young chefs a shot annually. Multiply this by giant, mid-size and small enterprises across the country and Canada could develop a concerted effort to provide work experience for the young.

And benefits accrue to the host. "It's also inherently viral," Senater points out. "Each new chef brings friends and family to their events, introducing the Dep to way more people than I could on my own."

Many businesses have internships, but it's so random that finding them can be difficult. In contrast, a nation-wide program, including a central database, to help youth find job experience would not only be a productivity boost, but would pay forward into the impending employee shortage when the baby boomers finally retire.

Even better, a percentage of these positions should be earmarked for those with disabilities. Among this group the unemployment rate hovers in the 60 per cent or greater range. My job-seeking daughter is deaf and part of that statistic.

"This experience really showed that I don't need hearing to be a good chef," Quinn says. "It also gave me a good idea about what to expect when I might head a restaurant one day."

It all adds up to a win-win in my books.

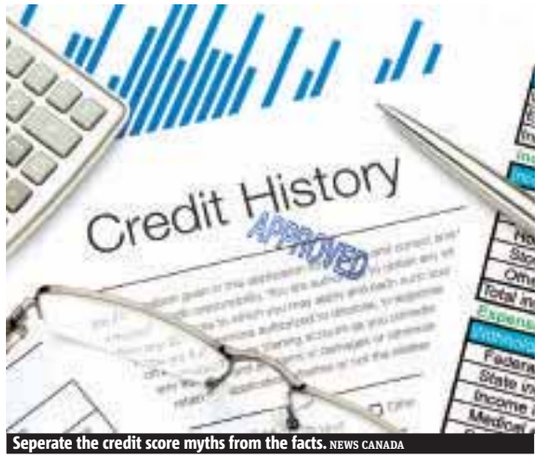
Contact Alison at griffiths.alison@gmail.com or alisongriffiths.ca

Quinn Cruise in the kitchen of The Dep. CONTRIBUTED

Four credit score myths busted

Your credit score is a three-digit number ranging from 300 to 900 that tells future lenders how risky it is to lend you money based on your history of making debt payments.

There are many misconceptions about what it takes to keep your score high. We asked Henrietta Ross, the CEO of the Canadian Association of Credit (CACCS) to help us sort fact from fiction:



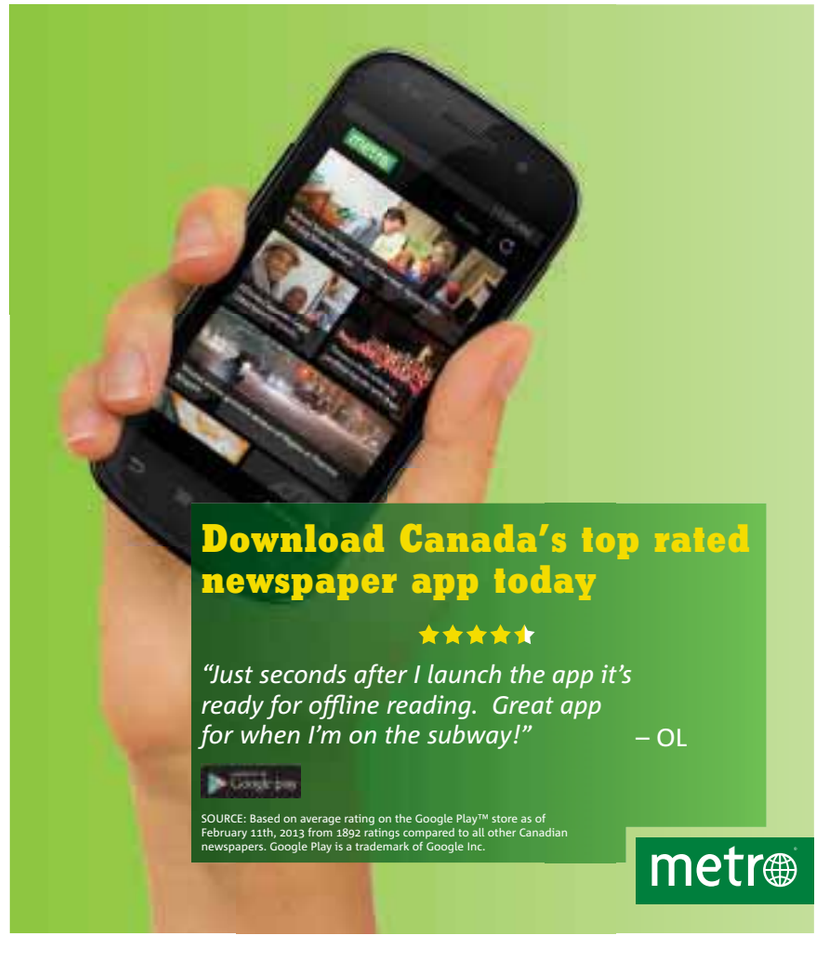
Seperate the credit score myths from the facts. NEWS CANADA

Myth 1
You must use major credit cards to build a good score.
Truth
If you're unable to obtain a major credit card, there are other ways to build your credit history. Making regular payments on instalment loans such as a car lease can positively affect your score, as do department-store cards and secure credit cards, which require a cash deposit in the amount of the credit limit.

Myth 2
You can't make up for mistakes such as late payments.
Truth
It takes time, but your credit will become positive as you build consistency with timely payments, Ross says. How much time it will take depends on a number of factors, including how long the late payment has been on your record and how long you've had the debt.

Myth 3
Paying cash boosts your score.
Truth
You need to use credit in order to demonstrate your ability to make payments. Using credit at least once every 30 days and making payments on time will keep you in good standing, says Ross.

Myth 4
I will not qualify for a mortgage if I've had a poor credit score.
Truth
Lenders look at your entire financial picture, including your assets, available cash flow and debt-to-income ratio. They'll also review your housing expense-to-income ratio, which is a comparison of your expected monthly mortgage payment with your gross monthly income. For more information on buying a home please visit, genworth.ca NEWS CANADA



Download Canada's top rated newspaper app today
"Just seconds after I launch the app it's ready for offline reading. Great app for when I'm on the subway!" – OL
SOURCE: Based on average rating on the Google Play™ store as of February 11th, 2013 from 1892 ratings compared to all other Canadian newspapers. Google Play is a trademark of Google Inc.
metro

Jacked up Blue Jays ready for game day

MLB. Toronto manager says Canada's new and improved squad is 'excited to get this going'

Manager John Gibbons leans against a batting cage while watching his players as the Blue Jays practise in Toronto on Monday in preparation for their opening day of the new season. CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Colby Rasmus' T-shirt showed a Blue Jay between a set of weights, with the words "Nothing is given, everything is earned" on the back.

It's a motto worth remembering this season, even in the luxurious man cave that serves as the Jays' clubhouse in the bowels of Rogers Centre.

Stocked with talent from Alabama to British Columbia and the Dominican Republic to Venezuela, this Toronto team is already seen as one of the best that money can buy.

The first question manager John Gibbons got Monday was a somewhat glib query from a local TV anchor asking if the news-conference format would be the same in the post-season.

Gibbons laughed, a little awkwardly, before answering, "Let's hope so."

Expectations are sky-high ahead of Tuesday's sold-out opener against the visiting Cleveland Indians.

"Really, you can't go anywhere without hearing something about the Blue Jays," acknowledged Gibbons, who starts his second stint at the club's helm. "That's why we're excited to get this going. Opening days are always exciting, but it can be a hassle, too, because you're drawn every which way.

"So we'd like to get that behind us, hopefully get a win out of the way and then move on from there and then play some regular baseball. But we're excited. We're ready, we've got a good team, we'll see what happens."

The high hopes come with a high cost.

Toronto's payroll is north of $125 million US, which ranks only eighth in the crazy-money world of major-league baseball. The Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Yankees are both over $220 million.

The injury-plagued club that went 73-89 to finish fourth last season in the AL East has been bolstered by the additions of pitchers R.A. Dickey, Josh Johnson and Mark Buehrle.

The infield has been reinforced by all-star shortstop Jose Reyes, Emilio Bonifacio and Maicer Izturis, while Melky Cabrera takes over left field.

Like a Formula One race car in the starting grid, the Jays are polished and purring, waiting for the green light.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Good to go

- Slugger and team leader Jose Bautista has recovered from the wrist surgery that cut his 2012 season short.
- GM Alex Anthopoulos has brought in veterans Mark DeRosa and Henry Blanco to mentor the likes of Brett Lawrie (who starts the season on the DL) and catcher J.P. Arencibia.

MLB

Red Sox rout Jeter-less Yankees 8-2

Pitcher Jon Lester and the Boston Red Sox got off to a quick start after a dreadful 2012 season, giving new manager John Farrell an 8-2 win over the barely recognizable New York Yankees, whose star Derek Jeter is out with a sore ankle, on opening-day Monday.

Newcomer Shane Victorino led a revamped Red Sox lineup with three RBIs and rookie Jackie Bradley Jr. walked three times and scored twice in his big-league debut. Boston's big day against CC Sabathia (0-1) came a year after it lost its first three games under Bobby Valentine and went on to a 69-93 finish.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NHL

Crosby, Subban, Bobrovsky earn March stars

Sidney Crosby's broken jaw was the unfortunate end of a spectacular month.

The NHL named Crosby the first star for the month after the Penguins captain's 25 points in 15 games helped Pittsburgh go undefeated in March.

Montreal defenceman P.K. Subban was named second star, while Columbus goaltender Sergei Bobrovsky took third star.

In weekly award winners, Toronto forward Joffrey Lupul was named first star, followed by San Jose goaltender Antti Niemi and Edmonton forward Taylor Hall. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Flames clearing house as Bouwmeester dealt

Jay Bouwmeester had six goals and nine assists in 33 games with the Flames this season. Bouwmeester was traded to St. Louis on Monday. RICH LAM/GETTY IMAGES

The Calgary Flames dealt defenceman Jay Bouwmeester to the St. Louis Blues on Monday night ahead of the upcoming trade deadline.

In return, the Flames acquired a first-round pick and two prospects — defenceman Mark Cundari and goaltender Reto Berra.

In the event St. Louis does not qualify for this year's playoffs, the Flames will receive St. Louis' fourth-round selection in this summer's draft, with the first-round pick being deferred to 2014.

The move comes after Calgary started a rebuild by trading captain Jarome Iginla to Pittsburgh last week. The NHL trade deadline is 1 p.m. on Wednesday.

Bouwmeester, who has an annual cap hit of $6.68 million US through to the end of next season, has six goals and nine assists in 33 games in 2013.

The six-foot-four, 212-pound blue-liner joined Calgary in 2009 after being drafted third overall by the Florida Panthers in 2002.

Bouwmeester has 71 goals and 229 assists in 10 seasons with the Flames and Panthers.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

See today's answers at metronews.ca/answers.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
What would you do if you knew all things were possible? So do it. Cosmic activity is so much in your favour at the moment that anything you try this week will work out well, maybe even spectacularly.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
The more you push, the more others will resist you and the more frustrated you will get. Maybe you should take the hint and stop trying so hard. Everything will work out for the best.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
The thing you most need to remember today is that other people need you more than you need them. Maybe you should find a way to remind them how much they struggle when you're not around.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
So you crave fame and fortune? There's a downside: loss of privacy and everything that goes with it. You don't care and you still want it? OK, now's the time to make your move.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Is there a belief or code of conduct that guides your actions? Is it living up to what you expected of it? If not, now is a good time to think in different directions. There are many paths to the ultimate goal.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
This may be a serious time for you but it's by no means unfavourable. In fact, you will find over the next 24 hours that business and financial matters go exceedingly well. No, really, there's no catch.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Go your own way, do your own thing today and don't worry what others think of it. Every now and again you need to get away from the crowd, and this is one of those times.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You may not be looking forward to a new responsibility but neither should you be facing it with so much anxiety. The worst rarely happens and once you get in the swing of things, you'll sail through.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Aim to be the best at what you do, today and every day. You've had your five per cent inspiration, now you need to start building up perspiration — that's the other 95 per cent.

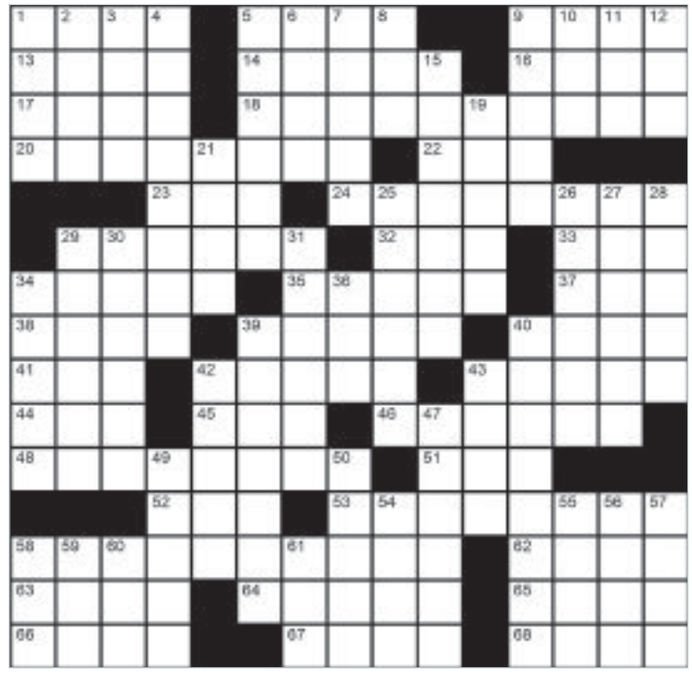
♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
This may be one of those days when everything you say is taken the wrong way. Be that as it may, you must not stop talking. You have a message to get across and the world needs to hear it.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You may be dealing with a number of serious things but you are still allowed to have fun. Make time in your busy schedule to visit a friend who needs cheering up. It will cheer you up too.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
You may not be the most practical member of the zodiac but you know what you like and you know how to get it. You also know that you should never let a good opportunity slip away, so get busy. SALLY BROMPTON

Crossword: Canada Across and Down

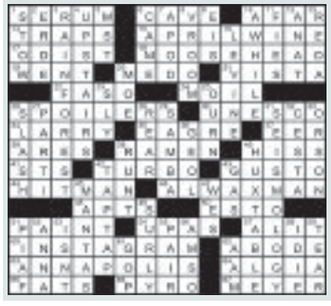
BY KELLY ANN BUCHANAN



Across
1. Sports org.
5. Up for it
9. Schooling reason, for short
13. Lofty title
14. Mr. Jannings, and others
16. Filing cabinet abbr.
17. Sir Guinness
18. NDP leader: 2 wds.
20. Stanley __, role in "A Streetcar Named Desire" (1951)
22. "__ Another Day" (2002)
23. Margarine holder
24. Jim Carrey/Matthew Broderick movie, "The __ __" (1996)
29. Self-sacrificer
32. Void, in Paris
33. Single
34. November's birthstone
35. 'Singing Cowboy' Gene
37. Time period
38. Rio's locale, for short
39. Suspicious
40. River of Russia
41. Q. "Is __ '_' that Canada begins with?" A. "Yes."
42. Uniform symbol
43. Way to buy movies, __ _ _ _
44. Encouraging exclamation!
45. Slangy one-eighty turn
46. Snake-haired Gorgon
48. Clothes-storing furniture pieces
51. Points out a suspect, for short
52. Languish
53. Tabasco, for one: 2 wds.
58. Canadian band, Bedouin __
62. After shave brand
63. Plinth
64. "__ Was a Lady"
65. Cheerful music
66. "__ better believe it!"
67. "Back in the _._._._." by The Beatles
68. Prefix meaning 'Outer'

Down
1. Escape
2. __ Alto, California
3. Mushroomed
4. Infamous prison
5. What Ringo does with 'a little help' from his friends: 2 wds.
6. "Star Trek" episode, __ Time
7. Imitate
8. Street for Freddy
9. Host an event
10. Prefix to 'gram' (Drawing)
11. __/_ (Them/You opposite)
12. "Proud Mary" gr.
15. Home of the Big Nickel in Ontario
19. Canadian actress, Evangeline __
21. Kellan of 'Twilight' movies
25. Pre-sporting event song
26. Defends
27. __ Bay, Nunavut
28. Give way
29. Bricks and __
30. Helicopter Prince Harry flies
31. Viking, for one
34. "Grease" (1978) gang member, _-__
36. 18th U.S. President ...his monogram
39. Tin-glazed earthenware
40. Broken/needs to be replaced
42. Worked in a restaurant
43. Betting likelihoods
47. "Take your pick."
49. Church council
50. Fish that are like herrings
54. Suffix with 'Psych'
55. Type of acid
56. "She Sells Sanctuary" by The __
57. 'Palm' suffix
58. Tofu base
59. Gold, in Spain
60. Arctic knife
61. Fiji's __ Islands

Yesterday's Crossword



Sudoku

How to play
Fill in the grid, so that every row, every column and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1-9. There is no math involved.

	6		3		5		9
8			7		4			2
	7			9			1
		5				8
7	4						2	1
		1				9
	8			3			7
5			6		2			9
	9		4		8		6

Yesterday's Sudoku

3	9	7	6	5	2	1	8	4
6	4	2	3	8	1	5	7	9
5	8	1	9	7	4	3	6	2
7	3	4	2	1	6	9	5	8
9	6	5	4	3	8	7	2	1
1	2	8	5	9	7	4	3	6
4	1	6	7	2	3	8	9	5
8	5	3	1	6	9	2	4	7
2	7	9	8	4	5	6	1	3

Today
3°/-7°
Partly sunny
Wednesday
2°/-11°
Variable
Know what the weather will be 14 days from now.
Check the 14 day trend.
©The Weather Network 2013

How do I become a Dentist ?

Explore what you want to be and how to get there.

Visit CareerBear.com to learn more